

ABSTRACT

Computer-implemented systems and methods for allowing a first processing type of software programs to be able to utilize a second processing type of software programs. For example, software programs that utilize a thread-based approach can utilize a different 5 processing type of software programs, such as task-based software programs or other single-threaded type of software programs.